

TITLEY TO KINGTON

A moderate 5.5 mile linear walk, with some climbs, leads to Rushock Hill where there are superb views across Herefordshire and Wales. The first part is on the Mortimer Trail, with frequent green and white waymarks to help you. The last part is on the Offa's Dyke Path, with the acorn (National Trail) waymarks to reassure you. Allow 3 hours.

The Walk - starts at the Monument, Titley.

1. Walk past Titley parish church along the pavement to the Mortimer Trail.

Note the old village well by the side of the road; such wells were commonplace before mains water arrived. Go left on a track, as signposted, through a gate and follow this ahead with a hedge on the right. Go through a kissing gate part way up and ahead to pass through another kissing gate into the next field. Follow the hedge on the right to reach a gate. Once through proceed ahead up the field and as the field corner bends right keep ahead to a kissing gate and head slightly right to go through a gate in the next hedge. Keep ahead again. Go through another gate, and now aim for a point just to the right of the farm, cross a stile and pass by the buildings.

2. Cross a stile onto a track, turn left and then right along a track, past more buildings and farmhouse. Proceed along a track, known as Green Lane, through two barred gates, then over a stile next to a gate and through a gateway, rising slowly above Titley seen below on the left. On reaching a barn (Burnt House) go ahead at the junction and cross over a stile to follow a fence on the right. Ignore two stiles on your right but cross another stile ahead of you into Stocking Wood. Proceed ahead but at the junction turn right over a stile and walk ahead with the fence and hedge on the left.

- 3. Enter a wood at Brampton Scar; the path bends right and left to weave between trees until it comes alongside a fence on the left. Cross a stile to follow a path beneath a dense coniferous patch. This eventually descends steps to join another track where you go left. Ignore a turning to the right behind you and very soon turn left. Cross a stile to enter a large field. You now leave the Mortimer Trail. Go half right up the hillside to cross a stile in the far top corner to join Offa's Dyke Path at Rushock Hill where there are excellent views across Radnorshire Forest.
